FALKENBERG FOOLS THE NAPS

Long Fellow Pitches His Best Game of the Season and Shows Good Form with Men on the Base—National Hickman at Opposite Times—Cleveland Scores First.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Cleveland, 3.
Olie Pickering's home-run smash that went over first base at a rate of ninety miles a minute, bounded into the bleachers, and was good for three tallies, gave the Nationals the final game of the series with the Cleveland Naps.

It was a cruel blow to the aspirations of the Naps, who had hoped to break even on the four games, but even had the ball not hopped into the uncovered stand the game would have ultimately resulted in favor of Washington, for in the eighth inning, with a man on second, George McBride almost equaled Pickering's feat by lambasting the sphere to the southern frontier of the park for a triple that gave the Nationals a tally that was really not needed in order to insure the victory.

Fred Falkenberg, the human skinner, who has been involved in more near-draws than a politician at a convention, came back strong after his last two poor exhibitions, and pitched his best game of the season. Few critics ever doubted the ability of the long fellow when at his best, but his earnestness when there have been men on the bases made him the most uncertain twirler on the local staff.

EFFECTIVE IN PINCHES.

Yesterday, however, Falkenberg not only fooled the opposition at the beginning of the innings, but when the bases were occupied he arose to the occasion and pitched really good ball. In the first inning the Naps scored after an error had placed their runner within scoring distance, but in the second, with only one out and a man on third, old Falk was the foxey boy and escaped by way of a double play. In the fifth, a single, a three-bagger, and an out gave Cleveland two runs, but in the eighth, when they threatened to win after they had gotten a man to third and another to second, Fearless Fred retired the next three men in order.

Jake Thielman was hit freely, and was especially untidy at critical times.
While most of the fielding chances were of the ordinary variety, Charley Hickman pulled off the prettiest play of the day when he made a one-hand stop of a hard-hit ball from Altizer's bat. The leather was speckling over first base when Cheerful Charley made a lunge and came up with the ball tucked away in his glove.

NAPS START SCORING.

The Naps scored in the initial inning.
Josh Clarke walked, and advanced on Bradley's sacrifice. Hickman gave Shipko a chance, which Bold Bird threw poorly, giving Clarke third, from which point he sprang home on Larry Lajoie's sacrifice fly.

The Nationals wasted hits in the first and third, but in the fourth made one run. Bob Ganley pushed a three-bagger against the centerfield fence, and after street laced the ball to left, scoring his captain.
Street made the ball to left, scoring his captain.
Street made the ball to left, scoring his captain.

The Nationals jumped into the lead in the fifth. Stovall hit over second and Thielman patted the ball to the fence for a triple, scoring the ailing athlete.
Falkenberg and Freeman took care of Josh Clarke, but when Bradley hit to Alitiz Darling Dave tried to throw Thielman out at the plate but was too late.
Bradley was safe at first. Hickman's sky scraper toppled over into McBride's glove and Lajoie ended the misery by whiffing.

The big happenings came in the Nationals' half of the fifth. After Milan had perished on a grounder, Shipko singled to center and Ganley was franked.
With men on first and second, Pickering found one of his choicest and sent it singling down the foul lines. Hickman came in at full speed, but before he could get to it the ball suited and ducked into the bleachers, while the crowd cheered heartily.

After Falkenberg had wiggled out of a strangle-hold in the eighth, with men on second and third, the Nationals got busy in their half and increased the gloom around the Cleveland bench by putting a run across the great divide on Freeman's single and McBride's triple.

DEL. REPORTS AT ST. LOUIS.

Jim Delahanty will not return to the Nationals until he reaches St. Louis.
It was thought that the second baseman would be in this yesterday, but, realizing that it would be impossible to work the rest of the series with the Detroit Tigers, Joe Castillon wired Delahanty not to report until the team reached St. Louis.
Several days ago Delahanty wired the manager that he was suffering from typhoid fever, and that, while he was recovering, it would be impossible to get into shape until the club started West.
Castillon understood that, as Altizer has been back pretty good ball, would be better to give Delahanty a longer chance to rest, so the regular second baseman will not report until the club opens the series with the Browns in the Mount City.

Special to The Washington Herald.

Roanoke, Va., July 20.—In a closely played game, Roanoke took the first of the series from Portsmouth to-day by the score of 6 to 5. Roanoke won by timely hitting and the poor fielding of the visitors. One feature was the home team's base running. Chenault was extremely wild, giving six bases on balls and hitting one man. Kunkin, Roanoke's new find, was behind the bat for the first time, and did good work. The score:

Special to The Washington Herald.

Danville, Va., July 20.—Danville won from Lynchburg to-day by hitting hard when their men were in. The two twirlers divided even on the number of hits, but Loos was far more effective at critical stages, having the visitors shut out at the beginning of the ninth. The Hill Climbers made a final bid for the game, a base on balls and a home run by Wallace netting them two runs. The stick work of Wallace, left fielder, was one of the features of the game, his scoring a triple and a single besides the home run.
He was caught off third after knocking

MACK MAY BUY TRENTON CLUB

Athletics' Manager Dickering for Tri-State Franchise.

Wants to Use Team as Farm for the Development of Youngsters.
Good Baseball Town.

Special to The Washington Herald.

Trenton, N. J., July 20.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, is dickering with Col. Lewis Perrine, the local baseball magnate, for the purchase of the Trenton Tri-State League club and franchise. Mack and Jimmy Collins have had several conferences with Perrine, and the deal is likely to go through. Perrine prefers to dispose of the club to local parties, but efforts to raise sufficient Trenton capital to complete the deal have thus far proved futile.
Local fans believe that Mack will buy the club for the reason that it would give him an opportunity to develop the majority of his young players near home.
With a good team the city is a money maker, which was demonstrated last season, when Trenton was the only city in the league to show a profit.
Manager Carney has been having a hard time to make both ends meet during the past few weeks, although the club is said to have even on the season. He would not confirm the report, but intimated it would not surprise him if the team belonged to Mack in a day or two.
